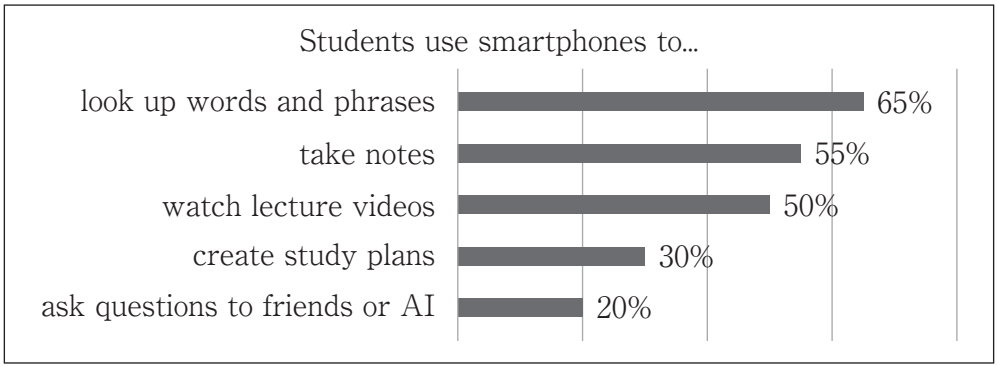
On the internet, I found an interesting article written by Ms. Green. She teaches computer science at a university. I want you to read it.

Students should use smartphones at school

Today, about 90% of junior high school students use smartphones at home, but only 15% can bring them to school.

I think they will study better with smartphones at school. Many students use them when they study at home. The graph below shows how they use them for studying at home.



Students have already found apps that do these things. If they cannot use these apps at school, they will have to change how they study. So, I think they should use smartphones at school.

As a junior high school teacher, I don't agree with her. I know some smartphone apps are good for studying. However, some may cause trouble at school. It's not good for our students to use smartphones at school.

What do you think? Why?
